

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion.

There are a number of reasons why the world's population is growing so fast. One of the main reasons is that the number of children born to each woman has increased. This is because of a number of factors, including the fact that women are having children at a younger age, and that there is a higher birth rate in developing countries. Another reason is that the number of people who are surviving into old age has increased. This is because of improvements in medical care and living conditions.

The world's population is growing so fast that it is becoming a major problem for many countries. There are a number of reasons why this is a problem. One of the main reasons is that there is a shortage of resources. This is because the world's population is growing so fast that there are not enough resources to go around. Another reason is that there is a shortage of jobs. This is because the world's population is growing so fast that there are not enough jobs to go around.
